

Anti-HER2 Affibody® Molecule, HRP Conjugated

BACKGROUND

The human epidermal growth factor receptor HER2 (Her2/neu, ErbB2, or c-erb-b2) is a growth factor receptor that is expressed on many cell types. HER2-proteins are over-expressed in a number of cancer types and assemble in homo- or heterodimers to form functional signaling units. When over-expressed, homo- or heterodimers of HER2 cause increased proliferation, decreased apoptosis, enhanced tumor cell motility and neo-angiogenesis – all being traits strongly associated with tumor formation. Thus, the her2 gene is considered an oncogene.

The Anti-HER2 Affibody® molecule is a highly specific affinity ligand selected against the extra cellular domain of HER2. The molecule is conjugated with maleimide activated horseradish peroxidase (HRP) at the unique C-terminal cysteine. The HRP conjugated Anti-HER2 Affibody® molecule is excellent for immunohistochemical staining of frozen tissue sections. Staining of paraffin embedded tissues is not recommended.
